"As a graduate teaching assistant and MSN student, I saw firsthand how the CSI team adapts to changing conditions to provide students with the best experiences. The modified hands-on skills labs and simulations were crucial when clinical experiences were suspended to ensure safety for students and faculty. It provided students exposure to real-life situations that would otherwise be lost through solely didactic education. The clinical and decision-making skills developed through simulation learning have been an invaluable aspect of nursing education at UT Health San Antonio."

Sue Jee, MSN Class of 2020, APRN, FNP-BC

The Center for Simulation Innovation (CSI) is leading and supporting the development of nursing students in preparation for this critical moment in time. Simulations prove to be a useful tool in a student's education, especially now as we continue to utilize telehealth medicine to serve our community as COVID-19 persists.

Last year, a global pandemic caused rapidly changing conditions and suspension of clinical experiences at UT Health San Antonio. During such uncertain times, the School of Nursing's faculty and the Center for Simulation Innovation (CSI) team provided methods that were in compliance with CDC COVID guidelines to continue hands-on and virtual telehealth experiences for our students. These exercises provide insight to real-life challenges and benefits of telehealth services. Our students never stopped learning. Students continue a path to caring for the health of our community.

With your support, nursing students develop into experienced health care professionals who provide advanced levels of highly sophisticated care. Please consider making a gift today. Help us shape the future of nursing and continue to educate future generations of health care heroes.

Together, we make lives better.
