

Dear Andrew and Lois,

My name is Stephanie Saba, and I am pursuing a M.A. in International Relations with a concentration in development and humanitarian assistance in the Maxwell School of Citizenship and Public Affairs.

The Maxwell School is preparing me for the future by giving me the opportunity to put the "international" in international relations. I recently completed my summer semester in Strasbourg, France, where I interned at the Council of Europe, an international human rights organization. This semester, I'm studying in Seoul, South Korea. Living and working abroad strengthens my language and cultural competency, preparing me for future work in the field.

As the recipient of the Lefkowitz-Mendik Family Endowed Scholarship and an Experiential Learning Award, I understand firsthand how giving can make an impact. Many people, like myself, come from disadvantaged backgrounds and would be unable to pursue an education without financial assistance. Being a scholarship recipient has given me the opportunity to pursue my master's degree and study abroad along the way.

Giving, in ways big and small, is one of the most remarkable things a person can do.

Here are just a few of the areas that alumni generosity is supporting at the Maxwell School:

- Helps students afford the cost of their education
- Allows students to take advantage of once in a lifetime research or career-networking experiences
- Supports world-class speakers and symposiums for students and faculty
- Creates additional opportunities for collaboration on meaningful, interdisciplinary projects

Your investment in the Maxwell School offers the opportunity to make a tremendous impact. A gift makes it possible for students to participate in high-quality experiential learning and networking opportunities. Please consider renewing your support of students with a gift of $25 to the Maxwell Dean's Discretionary Fund.

To me, being part of Syracuse University means always seeking ways to help people and make the world a better place.

When one of us rises, we all rise as Orange.

Thank you,

Stephanie Inbas
