How do you spell student success?

Z-A-W

Zaw Than Soe's purpose in life is to give back and to pay it forward. He is the only student at UW from Myanmar, and he is a vital and enthusiastic part of the larger community.

Zaw is studying civil engineering and wants to work in transportation or structural engineering. "When I came to the U.S. and saw skyscrapers for the first time, I was so emotional," Zaw says. "My dream goal is to one day proudly say, 'I built that skyscraper.'"

In addition to his coursework, Zaw works for WYDOT Design Squad, serves as marketing manager for the UW chapter of the American Society of Civil Engineers, and worked as the vice president of the International Student Association, co-founder in Belief charity group, and a volunteer for Laramie Interfaith. He also volunteers for World Language and Cultural Program for other students who want to practice the Burmese language.

Above all else, Zaw wants to be a good person and a good example to inspire others, just as others have inspired him, and he hopes to be able give his parents a comfortable life in their old age. "Education is the only way," he says.

Zaw is proud to be a Wyoming Cowboy. "The world needs more cowboys," he says.

At the University of Wyoming, student success is our purpose
and our responsibility.

Helping students find the right support and resources when they need it is really important. One way we do this is by offering advice and assistance before students even ask for it. We want to make sure students succeed in their studies and in life, so we work closely with different organizations to support them along the way.

Our main goal is to help students feel happy and engaged while they're at UW and to prepare them for their future careers.

We're truly passionate about ensuring every student succeeds and reaches their fullest potential.

Help us support Zaw and thousands of UW students just like him.

You will make a difference.
