U.S. News & World Report

"Being a student at Stetson University has allowed me to follow multiple passions. I've been able to take part in Student Pitch Competitions in the School of Business Administration, as well as start a new baking club on campus. There are so many ways to be a part of this community, and I'm grateful for my time here," says Kayla.

Your support provides funding to make each student's time at Stetson the best it can possibly be. “Stetson faculty embrace the teacher-scholar model, working closely with our students in the classroom and with our research. Gifts in support of our work as faculty positively impact students on their educational journey where a student is never just a number. I am proud to share this journey with my students and work alongside them in research and the classroom,” says Dr. Skelton.
